Recommendation – Andreas Schmidt Nielsen

Andreas worked with us during a 10-week internship at Rodinia Generation and has continued contributing afterwards in connection with his final project, where he remains involved with the company.

During his time with us, he quickly showed a strong ability to take responsibility and to drive his own work forward.

He worked under fairly independent conditions and was able to take ownership of tasks from start to finish, with limited guidance and regular sparring. One of the strongest examples was his work on developing and implementing an alarm system, where he managed the process from initial idea to a working solution in production.

Andreas is structured in his approach and particularly strong when it comes to documentation, making sure that his work is not only completed, but also usable for others afterwards.

He is curious, motivated to learn, and not afraid to take initiative. At the same time, he is very approachable and easy to work with, contributes positively to the team, and takes feedback well.

He also showed a strong willingness to help outside his own tasks, stepping in during busy production periods when extra hands were needed.

Overall, Andreas made a very positive impression – both professionally and personally – and we can confidently recommend him to future employers.
